

UNIVERSITY

Arizona State University

Arizona State University is one of the premier metropolitan public research universities in the nation. Enrolling more than 63,000 undergraduate, graduate, and professional students on four campuses in metropolitan Phoenix, ASU maintains a tradition of academic excellence in core disciplines, and has become an important global center for innovative interdisciplinary teaching and research. Arizona State offers outstanding resources for study and research, including libraries and museums with important collections, studios and performing arts spaces for creative endeavor, and unsurpassed state-of-the-art scientific and technological laboratories and research facilities.

ASU's historic campus in Tempe, which serves more than 51,000 students, offers the feel of a college town in the midst of a dynamic metropolitan region. ASU's West campus, in northwest Phoenix adjacent to Glendale, and ASU's Polytechnic campus, in Mesa, offer more specialized missions.

In partnership with the City of Phoenix, ASU opened in fall 2006 a Downtown Phoenix campus as part of a larger plan to revitalize the city's urban core. Nestled in the heart of downtown Phoenix, the campus provides an academically rigorous university experience in a modern, urban atmosphere. The campus enrolled 6,200 students in fall 2006 and is expected to ultimately grow to 15,000 students by 2020. Once the 20-acre campus is built to full scale, it will include 1.5 million square feet of academic, public, private and residential development set within a diverse and vibrant 24-7 living and learning environment.

ASU is research-driven but focused on learning – teaching is carried out in a context that encourages the creation of new knowledge. The faculty includes recipients of prestigious academic and professional awards, members of the various national academies and a Nobel Laureate. ASU has risen again in the national rankings for freshman National Merit Scholars, attracting a higher number of these bright students than almost any other public university in the United States. With a record 188 National Merit Scholars in this year's freshman class, ASU ranks third among public universities and eighth among all schools, ahead of Yale, Princeton and Stanford. The ASU student body includes 606 National Merit Scholars overall, raising the level of class discussion and inquiry across the campuses.

The university champions diversity, boasting one of the nation's largest Hispanic student enrollments and among the most Native American faculty members nationally. The university is international in scope, welcoming students from all 50 states and nations across the globe, and engaging in educational partnerships worldwide.

ASU is an active partner with the private sector in initiatives to enhance the social well-being, economic competitiveness, cultural depth, and quality of life of metropolitan Phoenix and the state.

ACADEMIC HIGHLIGHTS AT ARIZONA STATE UNIVERSITY

- ASU is a Doctoral/Research-Extensive I Institution, the highest distinction of the prestigious Carnegie Foundation classification system.
- ASU offers more than 250 majors through 20 colleges and schools, on four campuses in Metropolitan Phoenix.
- Football freshmen and team GPAs have been at all-time highs in the past two years. Nearly 60 percent of the student-athlete population were Maroon and Gold scholars (had at least 3.00 semester or cumulative GPA in the most recent calendar year), while 40 percent of the student-athlete population had a cumulative GPA of 3.0 or above.
- Nineteen ASU students have been chosen for the top three academic teams in the past 15 years, one of the best records of any public university in the nation.
- The Barrett Honors College is recognized as one of the nation's best. Its 2006-2007 freshmen class had an average SAT score of 1340, an ACT score of 30 and 188 National Merit Scholars. Almost 100 percent of students in the college who apply to medical and law school are accepted. The college was named one of the nation's top honors colleges in Reader's Digest's 100 Best Issue in 2006.
- With a record 188 National Merit Scholars in this year's freshman class, ASU ranks third among public universities and eighth among all schools, ahead of Yale, Princeton and Stanford. The ASU student body includes 606 National Merit Scholars overall, raising the level of class discussion and inquiry across the campuses.
- ASU's 2006-2007 freshman class included 87 National Hispanic Scholars, top-ranked students who are intensely recruited by schools all across the United States. The number brings the total National Hispanic Scholar enrollment to 227.
- ASU students have impressive records for Congressional Goldwater Scholarships (mathematics, science and engineering), British Marshall Scholarships (academics and leadership), Truman Scholarships (careers in public service) and Udall Scholarships (environmental/Native American).
- In a strong confirmation of the university's increasing global presence, a record 17 ASU students have won Fulbright Scholarships to study abroad next year, and 15 will study overseas on National Security Education Program (NSEP) awards. Another has won a Phi Kappa Phi study-abroad grant. This will be the largest number of national study-abroad awards in ASU's history. ASU ranks among the top public universities in the country for both Fulbright and NSEP awards. Even more impressive is the number of finalists who received awards. Of 22 Fulbright finalists, all but three have been named awardees or alternates, and one is still waiting to receive word. ASU ranks among the top public universities in the country for both awards.
- ASU is ranked as one of the top 100 universities in the world by the Institute of Higher Education, Shanghai Jiao Tong University (SJTU). ASU is placed at No. 100 in SJTU's annual "Academic Rankings of World Universities." ASU, which has made steady progress since first entering the rankings, moved from the top 150-200 universities in 2003, to the top 100-150 universities in 2004 and 2005, to its present ranking in the top 100.

President/Regents

Dr. Michael Crow

Michael M. Crow became the 16th president of Arizona State University on July 1, 2002. He is guiding the transformation of ASU into one of the nation's leading public metropolitan research universities, one that is directly engaged in the economic, social, and cultural vitality of its region. Under his direction the university pursues teaching, research, and creative excellence focused on the major challenges and questions of our time, as well as those central to the building of a sustainable environment and economy for Arizona. He has committed the university to global engagement, and to setting a new standard for public service.

Since he took office, ASU has marked a number of important milestones, including the establishment of major interdisciplinary research initiatives such as the Biodesign Institute; the International Institute for Sustainability; and MacroTechnology Works, a program integrating science and technology for large-scale applications, including the Flexible Display Center, a cooperative agreement with the U.S. Army. Under his direction ASU has initiated a dramatic research infrastructure expansion to create more than one million square feet of new research space, and has announced naming gifts endowing the W. P. Carey School of Business, the Ira A. Fulton School of Engineering, the Mary

Dr. Michael Crow with 2004 National Football Foundation Scholar-Athlete Skyler Fulton.

Lou Fulton School of Education and the Virginia G. Piper Center for Creative Writing. The university has also named the Sandra Day O'Connor School of Law. Prior to joining ASU, he was executive vice provost of Columbia University, where he also was professor of science and technology policy in the School of International and Public Affairs. As chief strategist of Columbia's research enterprise, he led technology and innovation transfer operations, establishing Columbia Innovation Enterprises (now Science and Technology Ventures), the Strategic Initiative Program, and the Columbia Digital Media Initiative, as well as advancing interdisciplinary program development.

He helped found the Center for Science, Policy, and Outcomes (CSPO) in Washington, D.C., a think tank dedicated to linking science and technology to optimal social, economic, and environmental outcomes. In 2003 CSPO was reestablished at ASU as the Consortium for Science, Policy, and Outcomes.

A fellow of the National Academy of Public Administration, he is the author of books and articles relating to the analysis of research organizations, technology transfer, science and technology policy, and the theory and practice of public policy.

Lisa Love was named Arizona State's Vice President for University Athletics on April 23, 2005.

At ASU, Love serves as the senior administrative officer of the university's athletic program, which features 12 women's and 10 men's sports, including men's and women's basketball, golf, swimming and diving, tennis, track/field and cross country; women's gymnastics, soccer, softball, volleyball, and water polo; baseball, football and wrestling.

In 2006-07 ASU finished 10th in the NACDA Directors' Cup Standings, a national ranking of all Division IA institutions.

Love is responsible for the management and development of one of the finest and most comprehensive athletic physical plants in the nation at ASU, playing host to nearly 1 million patrons each year. ASU's athletic staff includes more than 160 full and part-time coaches and administrative and support personnel who provide services to about 500 student-athletes.

Love chaired the Pac-10 Conference's Athletic Director's Revenue Sharing Committee in 2006-07 and actively participates in both Teach for America and Read for America, which requires teaching and reading to seventh and eighth-graders at C.J. Jorgensen School and Copper King Elementary School.

In the short time she has been presiding over the affairs of the ASU Athletic Department, Love has already established herself as one of the rising administrators in the country.

Love's ability to lead was evident right from the start. She had been on the job a little more than two months (officially began July 1, 2005) when ASU had to move its scheduled football game with LSU from Baton Rouge, La., to Tempe – in less than a week's time – because of the devastation caused by Hurricane Katrina in the state of Louisiana. In the end, $1 million dollars was raised through ticket sales from the game to assist with the Hurricane relief effort.

One of only six female athletic directors out of 119 at Division I Schools with football, Love has taken important steps since her appointment to ensure that ASU remains one of the premier athletic programs in the country. Receiving contract extensions in the last year have been head women's basketball coach Charli Turner Thorne (two Pac-10 Championships, five NCAA Tournament appearances and an Elite Eight appearance in 2007); head baseball coach Pat Murphy (five top 12 finishes in the last 11 years and two College World Series appearances); head women's tennis coach Sheila McInerney and women's golf coach Melissa Luellen.

In addition, Love was praised around the country for the hiring of veteran football coach Dennis Erickson, the 11th-winningest active coach in the nation and two-time national champion, and North Carolina State's Herb Sendek (12 postseason appearances in 14 seasons as a head coach) to guide the ASU men's basketball program. She also hired Kevin Boyd to coach the women's soccer program after leading California to eight NCAA appearances in the past 10 seasons.

"In a year of challenge, change and choice, Lisa Love has confirmed our wisdom in selecting her to lead one of the nation's great athletic programs," Arizona State President Michael Crow said. "She is setting the bar high, both for athletic and academic performance. She has demonstrated strategic skill in hiring, retaining and developing an exceptional athletic staff. Her vision and personal leadership skills are laying a foundation for sustained success."

Love came to ASU from the University of Southern California where she had been since 1989 as head women's volleyball coach (1989-98) and administrator (1991-2005). After leaving the coaching ranks following the 1998 season, Love devoted herself to administration full-time eventually ascending to the position of Senior Associate Athletic Director in 2002.

At USC Love handled the day-to-day supervision of eight sports – including women's basketball, volleyball, tennis and men's and women's swimming and diving – and monitored all women's sports at the university. She was active in the athletic department's strategic planning, gender equity, civil rights and NCAA certification issues and she served on the NCAA Management Council. She also served two stints (1992 - 1993 and 2001 - 2002) as vice president of the Pacific-10 Conference.

As a coach, Love was a master teacher at the pinnacle of her profession. She compiled an impressive 404-171 as a college head coach for 17 seasons at Texas Arlington (199-78 from 1982-88) and USC (205-93 from 1989-98). At USC, she led the Trojans to nine NCAA tournament berths and eight finishes in the national Top 15. She was selected as the Pac-10 Co-Coach of the Year in 1997. She was national Coach of the Year in 1988 when Arlington went 30-4 and fell one win shy of the Final Four.

Love served as president of the American Volleyball Coaches Association (AVCA) from 1997-98 and as the chair of the NCAA Division I Volleyball Committee. She worked on the AVCA All-America committee from 1987-89 and was a legislative representative to the AVCA Board from 1992-94. In 2005, Love was inducted into the AVCA Hall of Fame.
