Texas Tech University will play host to the tournament Thursday-Saturday, May 5-7 at the par 72, 6,328-yard Jerry S. Rawls Course. ASU has earned the No. 2 seed at the Central Regional and has earned its 13th consecutive bid in 13 years of NCAA regional action. With top five finishes in nine of 10 events this season, including three tournament victories, the Sun Devils head to the regional looking to qualify for the NCAA Championships for the 14th straight season. Twenty-one teams and three individuals have qualified for each of the three regionals with New Mexico State University playing host to the West Regional at the NMSU Golf Course in Las Cruces, N.M., Texas Tech University hosting the Central Regional at the Jerry S.
