Kelly Cowley, a team co-captain and ASU's only returning All-American, has been the model of consistency for the Sun Devils. Competing in every event except beam at all ten meets, Cowley's scores have counted toward the team total all but twice. All totaled, she has hit 28-of-30 routines this season and has scored a 9.8 or above in 19 of her last 24. Against Utah, Cowley had her best meet of the year with a personal season-best effort on vault of 9.875, a career-best-tying 9.925 on bars and a 9.9 on floor. Against Arizona, Cowley upped her career-best on floor to 9.975, leading ASU to a school-record 49.625 in the event. The following week vs. Auburn, Cowley turned in her sixth consecutive score of 9.9-or-better on floor.

Sophomore Ashley Ellsberry may have started the season cold, but she's been hot ever since. A beam and floor specialist, Ellsberry missed on both routines at the Maui Invitational, but has hit 18-of-18 since. Entering the season with a career best 9.9 on beam and 9.75 on floor, Ellsberry has improved both marks considerably this season. Her first breakthrough on beam came at the UNO's Classic, when she turned in a 9.925 (Feb. 23). Two weeks later vs. Auburn, Ellsberry earned an ASU season-best 9.95. On floor, Ellsberry has scored above her previous personal best eight times, including a 9.9 vs. Arizona.

One of four seniors on the squad, Kristin Fanning has been a rock of stability for ASU this season. While her season-best of 9.85 on bars has aided the ASU effort (career high 9.9), Fanning's biggest contribution has been on floor. Performing at all ten meets, Fanning has a team-high 9.862 average in the exercise, highlighted by a 9.95 total at Arizona. Ever-dependable, Fanning has produced a floor score below 9.85 only twice this season.

While she has also worked bars in five meets (season-high of 9.8), Rhonda Robinette has been a force on beam her junior year. Robinette's top beam scores of the season include a 9.9 vs. Arizona and a career-best 9.925 vs. Stanford. Minus a pair of falls, Robinette's lowest score of the year was a 9.8 vs. Washington.

Through ten meets, senior co-captain Kim Skinner has been a regular in ASU's bars rotation, competing all but twice on the apparatus. However, knee injuries to Ashley Stewart and Amber Giorgianni have thrust Skinner into the vault line-up the past two weeks where she has contributed to the team total both times with marks of 9.775 and 9.725, respectively.

After a disastrous start, Cassidy Vreeke has been rebounding toward a fine finish to her sophomore season. Through the first four meets, Vreeke competed once on floor, three times on vault and four times on beam, yet scored a 9.6-or-better in only three of the eight routines. Since then however, Vreeke has scored 9.8 or better in 10-of-15 routines. Included in that stretch is a career-high 9.875 on vault, three 9.85s on beam and a career-best 9.925 on floor.

After turning in a 38.475 vs. Oregon State in her only collegiate all-around appearance the second week of the season, sophomore Margaret Wojciak has competed in no more than two events per meet. Working bars a total of nine times this year, Wojciak has been heating up of late, with three career-best-tying marks of 9.9 in her last six routines, plus marks of 9.85 and 9.875.

Instant Injuries --

What had been a relatively injury-free season was redefined two weeks ago as ASU prepared for its dual vs. Auburn. First, in a March 6 practice, junior Ashley Stewart suffered a torn ACL and was lost for the season. Three days later, in ASU's final warm-up on vault, freshman Amber Giorgianni went down with an injured knee. While Giorgianni had also been a regular on beam (9.875 season-high), the Sun Devils' experience their greatest loss on vault, where Giorgianni had appeared in seven-of-eight meets and Stewart had competed in eight-of-eight. Combined, Giorgianni and Stewart produced five scores at 9.8 or better in 2001, including personal highs of 9.825 and 9.85, respectively.

Tale Of Two Extremes --

With the regular season complete, 2001 has truly seen some of the best and worst times for ASU gymnastics. At the season opening Maui Invitational, the Sun Devils stumbled to a team total of 191.525, its third-worst score since 1997. Considering that 10 of the last 15 season openers had seen ASU put up its lowest total of the year, there was reason to think that ASU would improve, but this much? In the nine meets since, the Sun Devils have put up six totals that rank among ASU's all-time top-ten: a school-record 197.45 vs. Arizona, a previous record-tying 197.125 at the UNO's Classic (now 2nd), a fifth-best 196.725 vs. Stanford, a seventh-best 196.35 that upset No. 1 UCLA, a ninth-best 196.15 vs. Auburn and a 10th-best 196.1 vs. Utah. Before the season, ASU had only seven scores of 196.0 or above.

The Streak --

For 25 straight meets -- including four in 2001 -- no one could overcome ASU at Wells Fargo Arena. Not even No. 1 UCLA. In that span, the Sun Devils beat 39 consecutive opponents dating back to 1996. However, in the 2001 season finale, ASU defeated Iowa and Kentucky, but could not top No. 7 Nebraska, which shot to No. 4 in the rankings after turning back ASU for only the third time in the last 44 meets at Wells Fargo Arena. The dates of ASU's last four home losses are as follows: Nebraska (3/16/01), Utah (2/2/96), Utah (2/11/94), Oregon State (2/7/92).

The Fans --

If you win, they will come. While ASU's attendance report might not rival Utah's (annually the nation's leader), this year the Sun Devils drew some of their biggest crowds in recent history. Drawing 2,108 vs. UCLA, 1,508 for the UNO's Classic and 1,108 vs. Washington, ASU welcomed its first, third and tenth biggest regular-season crowds in six years. Add to that totals of 907 (vs. Auburn) and 1,040 (vs. Nebraska, Iowa, Kentucky) and ASU finishes the 2001 season with a total attendance of 6,671 (1,334.2 per meet). In recent years, only the 1998 season comes close to rivaling this year's effort. That year, a six-meet schedule that included the Midwest Regionals drew 6,906 fans, for an average of 1,289. In 1997, ASU averaged 1,289 per meet with a four-meet total of 5,157.

Up Next --

The Pac-10 Championship meet is ASU's final opportunity to improve its qualifying score for the upcoming NCAA Regionals, April 7. The nation's top 18 teams will be seeded out to the six regional hosts, three per site. Remaining slots will be filled from within each host's region. The top-two finishers at each regional meet will advance to the NCAA Championships, April 19-21 at the University of Georgia. Regional pairings will be announced Monday, March 26.
